- As a degree final year student I have to state that the current B. Com syllabus is completely outdated and definitely need a steady reform. It doesn't speak about the current market requirement and students are just basically exhausted and are unable to contribute to the society after graduating from B. Com. The syllabus should concentrate on the practical side instead of just touching plainly on the vast and interesting topic of commerce. Also students are also unaware of the opportunities on the education of their respective subjects (Especially if we take the private Sector)
- Include translation, typing and spoken courses in syllabus
- Unavailable of book
- Placement facilities are not covered in the syllabus
- No need for two sets of internal exam
- Proper time for preperation and study of external examination is needed. Suitable study materials want to be provided

- Make the syllabus less it's too big for sems it can't be covered in 3 years
- Need reference material according to the Syllabus , we lack materials always and we usually skip the area due to lack of materials
- There is absence of proper guidance on some certain subjects. Some subjects and their related topics are too good but when it come to question paper it is not worth studying at all. The motive for studying and answering the questions, only what matters is scoring. Purpose of the particular topic just vanishes when it gets into some teachers.
- Need practical based syllabus, have to ensure reference books in library
- Need more applications
- Our current education system is failed.
- Internships should be included in each semester
- Rather than theory classes , more practicals and application level programs should be conducted. More internship options, industrial visit, give prime importance for other career options also not only for qualifying csir net for PhD.
