

Workshops/Seminars Conducted during the year 2022-23

Department of Political Science

Dr Sheeja Kuriyakose, a distinguished expert in the area of Research Methodology in Social Sciences was invited by the Department of Political Science to deliver a lecture on the topic 'Research Methodology in Social Sciences' for the iii Semester PG students on 14/11/2022 at 10 am. This talk was organized with the aim to equip our post graduate students with the skills necessary to design, conduct and write up empirical studies in the social sciences as a part of their course.

The discussion helped the students to develop a deep insight into the fundamental matters of Research Methodology such as what constitutes 'good' research questions and consider examples from an array of fields and methodological traditions. They were helped with many examples to identify problems, theory building and testing, and considering causality, measurement, sampling, generalizability and research ethics. The discussant also briefed how these elements of research design come together in a single manuscript that stands a reasonable chance of publication in a reputable journal.

The seminar commenced with a warm welcome to the distinguished speaker, Ms. Anu Maria Francis, by Dr Antony Dawson D'Silva, the faculty of the Department of Political Science. The audience, consisting of students, teachers, and researchers from Maharaja's College and neighbouring institutions, eagerly awaited the enlightening session. Ms. Francis began her presentation by providing a comprehensive overview of public policy, its definition, and its significance in contemporary governance. She delved into the intricacies of policy formulation, implementation, and evaluation, emphasizing the dynamic interplay between government decisions and societal impact. The session was enriched with real-world examples and case studies, allowing the audience to grasp the practical implications of public policy. Ms. Francis encouraged interactive discussions, fostering a stimulating exchange of ideas among the participants.

The seminar successfully engaged the audience through thought-provoking discussions and Q&A sessions. The participants actively shared their perspectives on various policy issues, creating an intellectually stimulating environment. The seminar proved to be an enriching experience for the participants, offering valuable insights into the complexities of policy-making. The event successfully achieved its goal of fostering a deeper understanding of public policy among students, teachers, and researchers.
