The other end of pazhampori

People have braved high seas, and endured much hardships in search of new lands and experience. One of our photojournalists recently 'discovered' the other end of pazhampori after a smooth voyage. We were in Kavaratti, Lakshadweep, covering an event, and stepped into a restaurant for a quick bite and tea. As usual, the photojournalist, surveyed the restaurant, until his rowing eyes got transfixed on the platterful of snacks brought to the table. Even before we could speak, the waiter started explaining: "This is pazhampori, and this is samosa..." As curiosity took over, the lensman pointed at the snacks

Students of Maharaja's College perform a flash mob as part of the Vigilance Awareness Week at Marine Drive on Thursday. The event was jointly organized by NSS unit of the college and Canara Bank he was not familiar with. "Oh, this massappam; and that is pookkuth," the waiter merrily responded until my colleague pointed at a fried, yellow snack and asked for its name. A quizzical look later, the waiter lowered his voice and replied: "Sir, it's the other end of the pazhampori I had showed you earlier."

Autos fleece commuters

It may not be unusual to hear autos fleecing commuters in most cities in the country, yet the auto drivers in the commercial capital of Kerala seem to be so unscrupulous in their demands. A newcomer to Kochi commuting in an auto from South railway station to Marine Drive the other day was forced to pay through the nose. The auto driver refuses to go on meter rates and assures a drop at Rs 147, yet on reaching, demands 200 bucks and the commuter is forced to pay to avoid a tiff. If unaware of the routes, you will be caught off guard when the auto driver too would feign of being unsure about the route and would take all possible routes to eventually prove that the earth is round. Some of them may sound reasonable charging slightly higher than the nominal rates from commuters citing increased fuel rates.
